Support grows for Baltimore protests as demonstrations spread across the U.S.

(CNN) Several hundred people streamed into Union Square for an "NYC Rise Up & Shut It Down With Baltimore" rally Wednesday night. Protesters were met by New York police officers who pushed them back. A small scuffle broke out between the two front lines and police placed at least 20 people in zip ties in the street. The NYPD also handed out fliers and used loudspeakers to tell protesters and pedestrians to stay on the sidewalk. One person was placed in an ambulance and taken away. The crowd headed toward Times Square. The New York Police Department told CNN that more than 100 people were arrested during the demonstrations. The rally was organized through social media. The demonstrators chanted "Black Lives Matter" and "Justice for Freddie Gray" -- the Baltimore man whose death sparked street confrontations in Baltimore.

Wayward Russian spacecraft expected to re-enter atmosphere

(CNN) An unmanned Russian spacecraft originally bound for the International Space Station will re-enter the Earth's atmosphere after flight controllers lost contact with it, American astronaut Scott Kelly said Wednesday. The spacecraft that lost contact with flight controllers will re-enter the Earth's atmosphere in about a week, Roscosmos, the Russian Federal Space Agency, said Wednesday. "Roscosmos (the Russian Federal Space Agency) announced that the Progress will not be docking and will re-enter the Earth's atmosphere," Kelly said from the space station. The Progress resupply vehicle will come off its orbit and will begin its combustion in the atmosphere between May 5 and May 7, according to Roscosmos. The Progress vehicle does not present any danger to the International Space Station due to a significant difference in orbit, Roscosmos added. Russia lost contact with ISS Progress 59 during a resupply mission to the International Space Station. The ship is now spinning out of control, NASA said. Even if Russia hadn't lost contact with the craft, the original plan was for Progress to burn up re-entering Earth's atmosphere -- albeit with garbage rather than a full load of equipment for the space station.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

High pressure will bring dry conditions to northwest California the rest of this week. Interior temperatures will be well above normal today into the weekend.

Medford Weather:

A developing thermal trough and a building ridge overhead will bring warming conditions to the forecast area over the next two days with Friday being the warmest day. Offshore flow will bring very warm temperatures to the coast along with gusty northerly winds.

Reno Weather:

Temperatures will remain well above normal this week. A weak low pressure trough will develop and near the west coast for the end of the week and this weekend. This will result in a return of showers and thunderstorms.

San Francisco Weather:

Warm to hot weather will develop today as light offshore flow develops over the bay area. Some cooling will develop as early as Friday afternoon as the sea breeze returns to the coast. More noted cooling back to seasonable temperatures will occur this weekend as the marine layer returns to the coast with night and morning low clouds followed by sunny and mild afternoons.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Mainly dry and warm weather with above normal temperatures can be expected through early next week. A weak trough will bring a chance of showers or thunderstorms near the Sierra crest the next several days. Breezy north winds are expected today mainly northern Sacramento Valley and on the west side of the Sacramento Valley. Low pressure will bring a more widespread threat of showers or thunderstorms during the middle of next week but still mainly over the mountains.

Hanford Weather:

Mainly dry weather and above normal afternoon temperatures can be expected over the central California interior through the weekend. Isolated thunderstorms will be possible over the sierra each afternoon.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure will bring above normal temperatures and fair skies into Friday. By early next week a low will arrive to deepen the overnight marine layer and cool the afternoon temperatures to near normal with the nighttime lows to be above normal into midweek.

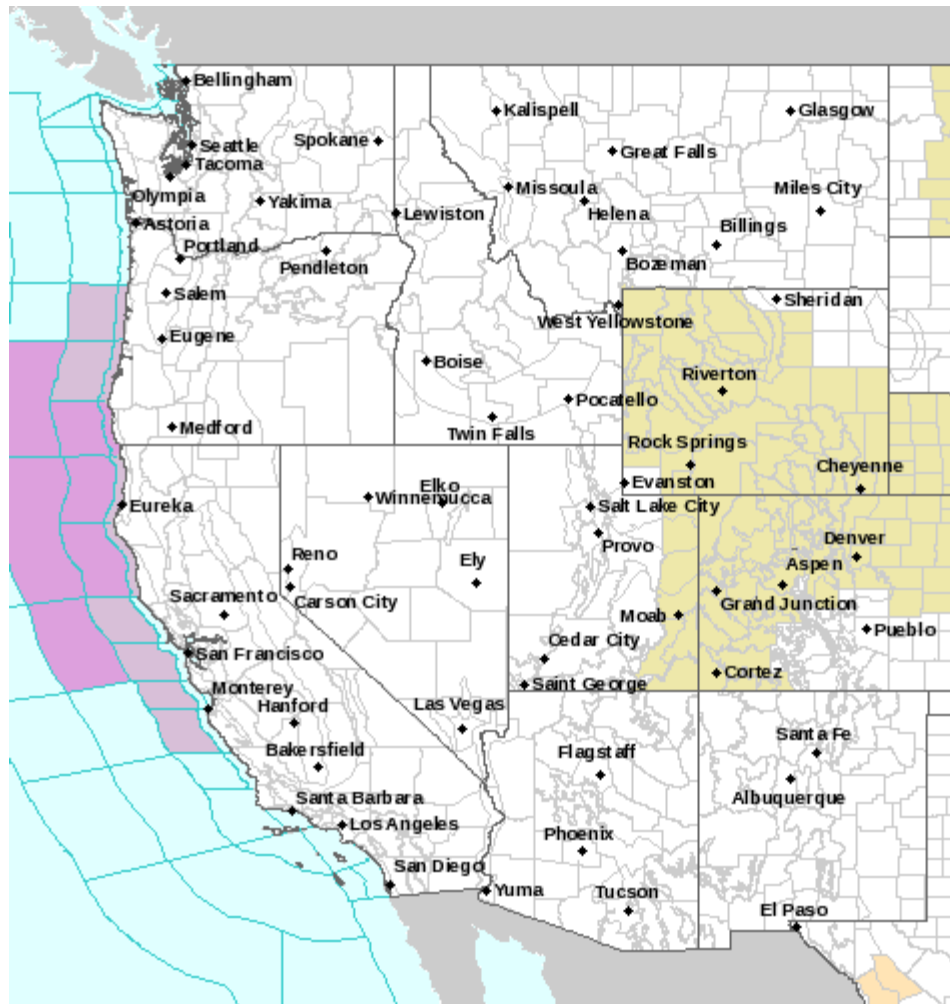

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

High pressure over the southwest will bring sunny hot days inland through Friday but slightly cooler at the coast. The high pressure will break down allowing the marine layer to develop and a cooling trend for all areas over the weekend. The cooler weather with more coastal clouds are expected next week.

Southeast California Weather:

The warming trend will continue the next several days with many desert locations forecast to reach the triple digits today and Friday. Temperatures will cool slightly through the weekend as a weak storm system moves in which may lead to a few showers for higher elevation areas early next week.
